Reflection

In our reading from his letter to the Romans, Saint Paul talks about the wonderful diversity of gifts given to individuals in a Christian community. For Paul, this variety of gifts is necessary for building and strengthening the faith of the community. No one person can do everything. Each of us is important for what we bring. A properly functioning Christian community is one that nurtures, values and encourages the gifts of all. So, we should ask ourselves: are we such a community? What do you think?
